Main Concrete Work Finished on P.M.C.

This week sees the wind-up of the concrete pouring into the abuttment forms on the P.M.C. sight in Wainwright, Mr. Gene Tory reports that this is finished now and the trusses can be raised as soon as they are ready. Of course this is only the major portion of the cement work, as foundations must still be poured but it is estimated that these can be done in short order.

Mr. Garry Cook has contracted to build the trusses and at the present time has two of the 11 completed. A serious hold-up was felt last week due to the shortage of steel rod, used in making the five foot bolts that tie the truss structure together. If the steel shortage had not presented itself, it would have been possible to have approximately five trusses built by this time, but the building committee have secured the necessary steel and once more the contractors are busily making the structures.

Salvaging material from the former Buffalo Park Abbitoir is continuing at a fast pace. Volunteer labor was utilized during the first part of the demolition. Two good-size buildings were torn down providing some well needed material. Wainwright Construction Co. has taken on the contract to salvage the materials from the main abbitoir building. The bottleneck at the present time in this phase of the operations is the lack of trucks to cart the material to the P.M.C. site. It appears that all local trucks in the district are at present busy. Anyone wishing to donate the use of a truck and driver, it would be appreciated if they get in touch with Mr. P. M. Armishaw by phoning 10.

United Church Scene Of Autumn Nuptials

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized on Tuesday October 5th in Grace United Church uniting Alice Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Dickout, of Wainwright and John Reginald Ford, son of Mr. J. C. Ford also of Wainwright in marriage. Rev. M. Dobson read the marriage rites.

Given in marriage by her brother Mr. Donald Dickout, the bride was tastefully gowned in a floor length dress of white sheer with finger tip veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses with white carnations and fern. Her only ornament was a wrist watch, a gift of the groom.

Attending her sister as maid of honor Miss Clara Dickout wore a blue taffeta gown with shoulder veil. Miss Velma Knott and Mrs. Walter Thayer, bridal attendants chose a pink sheer floor length dress with matching veil and a yellow satin and net floor length dress respectively.

Mr. Arthur Ford supported his brother as best man.

Wedding music was played by Miss Pauline Dixon.

Reception to the guests was held at the home of the bride's parents where the rooms were decorated with pink streamers and the bride's table was centred with a five tier wedding cake. Mrs. M. Plaxton and Mrs. M. James poured tea and coffee at the reception with Mrs. T. Goddard and Mrs. Knott acting as serviteurs.

Mrs. Dickout chose a brown dress and accessories with corsage of pink carnations for her daughter's wedding.

For a wedding trip to Edmonton and other points west, the bride chose a wine crepe dress and wine coat with black accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Ford will reside in Wainwright.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thayer and son of Kinsella.

WAINWRIGHT U.F.W.A.

The Wainwright U.F.W.A. met at the home of Mrs. W. C. Taylor on October 6. Report of progress in plans for "Home for the Aged" was given.

Answers by Alberta Government to resolutions presented by convention were read. No bulletin being at hand, the pamphlet "Colour in Your Home" by Tintex was read and discussed.

LIBRARY NOTES

Three very good readable books have been added to the Library this week.

"No Highway"—Nevil Shute

Mr. Shute can be depended upon to spin us a fine tale—and "No Highway" is no exception. The story is told by Dennis Scott of the Royal Aircraft Establishment, but the hero is really Mr. Honey, a scientist working under Scott. An airplane has crashed in a transoceanic flight; and if the scientific theory is correct then the other planes of the same type have only so many hours of flying time left. The story is woven around their hazardous investigation of the crash.

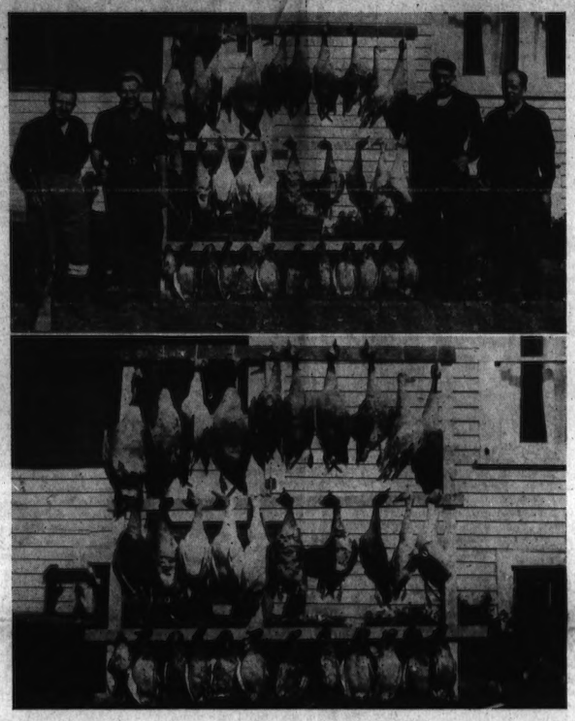

"Emergency Surgeon"
Paul H. Ostek, M.D. and Robert S. Richardson

Dr. Ostek is the surgeon at the Emergency hospital in Pasadena, California. He has told Mr. Richardson about his life there and of the different types of cases coming to "Emergency" and in many of them the human story behind the case.

"In Search of South Africa"
H. V. Morton

For all the readers who have been waiting for another "Morton book" here is his latest one—and enjoyable reading it is. No other writer seems to have quite Mr. Morton's gift of dipping back into history, observing the present and reporting it so that the reader sees the country too.

Some "Fellas" Have All the Luck

WEDDING BELLS

LEE — PON

With the Rev. Robert W. McLauchlin conducting the ceremony at First United Church on Monday, September 27, Vera K. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guey Pon, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Lee, Galt, son of Mrs. Lee and the late Mr. George Lee, Woodstock. Mr. Allan played the wedding music and soloist was Mr. Charles Kiel.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Victorian-styled satin gown with matching satin halo and veil. She carried white gardenias, Sweetheart roses and white gladioli. She wore a Chinese gold ring, the gift of the groom's grandmother in Los Angeles, and around her neck was a jade pendant on a gold chain. The bride was attended by her three sisters, Miss Lily Pon, as maid of honour, in peach taffeta styled on Victorian lines, and carrying Sweetheart roses on a blue Chinese fan; and Miss Jennie Pon and Miss Dorothy Pon, gowned in pale green taffeta on Victorian lines They carried yellow roses on yellow Chinese fans. Best man was Mr. William Lee, while ushers were Messrs. George and Fred Lee, all brothers of the groom.

At a reception for 200 guests, the bride's mother received in a grey crepe gown trimmed with turquoise, and matching hat. Her corsage was of red roses. She was assisted by the mother of the groom wearing a Victorian green crepe gown with grey accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Going away on a trip to New York the bride wore a three-piece suit of grey tricotine and black accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias and Sweetheart roses. They will live in Galt.

BUILDING THE MAN
Edwin Markham

We are all blind until we see
That in the Master's plan
Nothing is worth the building
Unless we build the man.
Why build these cities glorious
While man unbuilded goes.
We cannot build a world, unless
The builder also grows.

Miss Mary Flamand Wed In McLennan

St. Paul's Anglican Church, McLennan was the scene of a quiet wedding on Monday, October 4th, when Miss Mary Virginia Flamand, eldest daughter of Mrs. Adeline Flamand and the late W. J. Flamand of Wainwright was united in marriage to Mr. William Chalifoux, second youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Luke Chalifoux. Rev. H. E. Hill performed the wedding ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, was in a white frock with matching accessories and white chapel veil and carried a bouquet of carnations. Miss Clara Gladeau, as maid of honor, chose a pale blue dress with matching veil and corsage of white gardenias. The bridesmaid Miss Grace Clark wore a pink gown with matching veil and a corsage of white gardenias.

Mr. Hank Flamand acted as best man. Witnesses were Miss Marie Chalifoux, sister of the groom and Mr. Edward Gorbett.

Elks Stage Thanksgiving Dance In Town

Approximately 70 couples danced to the music of "The Swingsters" on Monday night, October 11, as the local Elks Lodge staged the Thanksgiving Day dance in the Separate School Auditorium.

Many of the Elk members attending wore the traditional fezz, which added a bit of color to the function. Advance ticket sales were carried out and proceeds were to be used by the Elks for charity purposes.

The highlight of the evening was the door prize offered by the Elks in the form of either a battery or electric Philco radio. The two radios sat side by side on the stage during the night. The winner was declared by placing ticket stubs in a churn, and a soldier of the P.P.C.L.I. stationed at the Wainwright Camp making the draw.

Lunch was served at intermission by the ladies of the O.O.R.P., and dancing continued until the traditional hour of 2 a.m.

Girls Auxiliary

The Anglican Girls Auxiliary, "Cheery Chums," started this seasons meetings on September eighth.

The members began immediately to plan for the Women's Auxiliary Bazaar on November 27. Bazaar work is going ahead at quite a fast pace, and everyone seems very enthusiastic about it. Election of officers took place at the fourth meeting, September 29. The following officers were elected:

Vice President—Naoma Mockford
Secretary—Jessie Harding
Treasurer—Ruth May
Program Committee—Mable Armishaw, Phyllis Mulvey, Betty Lou Rourke

Local Hunters Return With Fine Showing

Four Wainwright hunters in the persons of Messrs H. A. Koch, S. Robblee, S. Ryan and J. Davidson, journeyed to the Coronation district on the week-end of October 1st. This is the date the shooting season opened in that district and the hunters were on hand as the sun rose over the hill to try their luck for some of the numerous geese reported feeding there.

After spending a day there, and being unable to legally shoot more birds the quartet returned home on Saturday night with the trunk of their car well stocked. The legal limit for one day being five geese, each member of the party had that amount, plus a few ducks for good measure.

Pictures of the shooting results will be found elsewhere on this page The Editor after taking the picture, was offered his pick off the rack, and being strictly a vegetarian when it comes to wild fowl, had to decline the offer.

Birth statistics always show an excess of male over female births. In 1941-45 for every thousand Canadian girls born there were about 1,060 Canadian boys born.

QUIZ---NEW STYLE

We see where the big chart and figure boys at Ottawa are sending a squad into the country to find out how we're spending our money.

They're going to ask some 15,000 families such assorted questions as how much does Dad spend on beer in a year and what does daughter get stuck for lipstick.

At the time of writing though, we are not certain that they are planning on taking the Wainwright district into their confidence. Other weekly papers have carried advertisements in their columns advising the public to expect a lot of snoopy questions. We presume from this that those locations will definitely be covered. Up to now no such advertisement has appeared in "The Star".

The idea is to see whether the cost-of-living index is up to date and to let the statisticians know what effect changes in various taxes would have on the Canadian way of life.

We wish the 250 questioners luck—and they're going to need it. In about one home in a thousand they'll run into an accountant or an actuary who will drag out the household accounts and answer every question without a stutter. For the rest—chaos.

"Mr. Pacaday," says the interviewer lucky enough to get in the house and find the whole family at home, "what did you spend on smokes last year?"

"Well, err, ah—well, I smoke half a pack a day. But that varies, of course, and sometimes I roll my own. Usually have a cigar on Sunday but not always and smoke a pipe occasionally. You figure it out."

With his wife in the room the victim is likely to be even less explicit about his beer intake. While the family's eyebrows rise he'll probably put it at something like a tenth of the actual figure and thank goodness he isn't under oath.

But the interviewer will run into real confusion when he asks the female members of the family how much they spend on Christmas presents.

"Well, that's easy," says the housewife. "We always work it out to the cent. Let me see now, I spent $3 on Aunt Lucy's slip. But my daughters went halvers on that so it's really only $1.50. But Aunt Lucy sent us a cake dish that's worth $5 if it's worth a cent. So we really saved $2 on that—or is it $3.50?" And so on far into the night.

As we said, we wish them luck.

PUBLIC SERVANT No. 1

That rating may be rather on the high side, and handing out the bouquets a little too liberally—but when we think of how apt we are at directing criticism and too often undeserved criticism at these much maligned public servants, it may be well to err slightly in the other direction at times.

Just at the moment we were thinking of those hard-working and sadly underpaid individuals who allow themselves to be cajoled into accepting office as municipal councillors.

Let's take a look at what being a councillor adds up to. Not that figures can give you an accurate measure of the immense amount of work that a councillor is called upon to do, but rather as a starting point. Here are the figures:

There are seven councillors and the Reeve in the Municipal District of Wainwright. (Total payment to the Reeve for his duties do not make a great deal of difference to the cost of the supervision of roads and meetings so we have considered it in these figures. The authority for the figures is the 1947 financial statement.

Each councillor is the representatice of approximately 228 farmers and their families and hired men. He has under his supervision 296 miles of road and has to supervise and direct the expenditure of $54,600. He is called upon, aside from the supervision of roads to attend 12 regular meetings of the council per year, many of which are two day meetings. In addition to this he is expected to attend the annual meeting and as many rate payers' meetings as required. In the discharge of his duties, he travels approximately 2,191 miles. He spends about 33½ days actually supervising roadwork, and countless other hours in planning, thinking, visiting and checking over the need for public works. He costs each ratepayer about $1.96 per year, and his wages form 1½ per cent of the total tax burden.

He is expected to make a completely inadequate roadwork appropriation, fulfil, as nearly as possible, the desires of the ratepayers in his ward. He has to listen to pleas, crabs and tirades. He is called upon to neglect his own business of farming whenever the call of duty is heard, and to sit for hours discussing the business of his electors. He pays for his own meals and smokes while attending council and the wages he gets, $5.00 per day, are not sufficient to pay a first class man to do his job for him.

When there are compliments coming his way they seem to have a strange propensity for disappearing before he hears them—but when criticism is in the air it hits its mark with surprising regularity.

Really it should be worth more than $1.96 to just have somebody to blame for things without his working in the bargain, and do so with no hope of personal gain.

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA
by the Canadian Press

In a brief three-day national convention, 1,311 Progressive Conservative delegates set to work with a zest surprising to even veteran observers to elect a new leader and forge a new party platform.

To replace John Bracken, 65, who had led the party as opposition leader in the Commons for the last six years, the voting delegates had Earlier a fourth Commons member for Toronto Eglington; John Diefenbaker, member for Lake Centre, Sask; and Premier George Drew of Ontario.

The pre-election battle raged for hours on end in the corridors and committee rooms of the sprawling Coliseum in Ottawa's Lansdowne Park.

Earlier a fourth Commons member, Garfield Case of Grey North, Ont., who had prepared himself to battle for the leadership, backed out just before nominations closed on the eve of the election.

However, he might look at it the new leader of the party had a great problem ahead of him. Except for a five-year term that started after the depression of the early '30s the Conservatives had been out of power for about 15 years.

It was necessary to realign the party's "opposition" outlook and hammer out a new platform that would have the greatest appeal to the voters of 1949 and 1950.

Threat of Communism

Biggest thing, the party decided, was the threat of Communism within the country and the greater threat of the Soviet without.

In the 30-plank proposed platform by the 193-man resolutions committee, a major item was the outlawing of Communist activities in Canada.

While some 3,000 supporters looked on, the voting delegates spoke in favor of advocating resistance to "any policy of appeasement in the face of aggression."

A resolution on foreign policy read: the present policies of the Russian bloc of nations, with their imperialistic aims and unilateral actions, are leading the world toward war."

Attuned to the needs of the country, a resolution on defence, urged an adequate air defence for Canada, full-strength active and reserve force, an "effective" airborne force, an emergency plan by which industry could be put on a war footing, and a set-up of emergency civil aid and defence for urban areas.

In the same resolution, it was proposed that Canada "immediately participate in the airlift supplying Berlin," which has been blockaded by Russian land forces for the last three months.

Wheat Marketing

Internally, only a resolution on agriculture showed there may be some dissension in the party.

This was the issue on whether the party was in favor of state marketing of wheat or whether it should favor a return to pre-war conditions when wheat was marketed in whichever way the producer liked.

A resolution framed by some of the delegates favored a return to the pre-war marketing basis which would mean the re-opening of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange to the sale of wheat.

Two Alberta delegates, A. Haarstad of Bentley and W. J. Wilde of Red Deer, opposed the resolution.

They demanded that the current system be continued and said that open-market trading would lead to speculation, Haarstad said he was ready to hand in his resignation if the resolution went through. Wilde said he voiced the opposition of all the Alberta farmers to the handling of wheat through the grain exchange.

The Opposite View

There were others, of course, who favored the resolution. W. J. Swaim of Grandview, Man., said that as a wheat farmer he objected to being told where to sell his wheat.

Jack McDowell of Iberville, Man., said western farmers had lost $786,482,000 through the government policy of purchasing their wheat at a fixed price—lower than the world price—and handling the marketing.

"We cannot control the farmers" he warned the convention. "The price of wheat is a concern to every man, woman and child living on the Prairies."

In the second day of their three-day meeting, the delegates re-affirmed the party's faith in "free enterprise" and dissociated themselves "entirely from Socialism."

The party favored free enterprise as the only sound basis for personal liberty; no infringement of provincial rights; opposition to Socialism; confirmed the need for currency devaluation; a boost in income tax exemptions; floor-price legislation; a free market for gold; a Trans-Canada highway; abolishment of the $2.50 radio licence fee and a long-range immigration plan.

IN OUR TIME

By Howie Hunt

"So., Just between you an' me - is wrestling on the level or isn't it?"

Joe Rutledge Says

By Joseph Lister Rutledge

A HOBBLE OR AN INCENTIVE?

It must be clear to anyone that what we urgently need is more of all sorts of goods—more cars, more refrigerators, more shoes, more shirts and more butter. For lack of them, for lack of all sorts of products, our growing earnings seem to make little difference to us. They are offset by the mounting cost of living that results from too many people wanting goods that are too scarce.

We have many solutions for this problem. We demand more wages to offset these growing living costs only to discover that before we have the wages the costs are up again. Wiser folk urge that we attack the problem a different way: produce more goods so that we won't be forever competing against one another for the few available. Our government smiles approval. It points out that the continuance of our great industrial expansion that provides our profitable jobs depends on our having a margin of goods to export. But the simple wisdom of this course is offset by the discouragements that face those who would adopt it. The discouragements come from the same government that is constantly urging production. Out of one side of its mouth it says "Work harder." Out of the other it says: "If you do, we will take much of what you earn from you."

It says to the young man out of school or college: "Don't earn more than $400. If you do, we will take a part of it, not from you, but from your parents." It says to the young wife who might wish to supplement her husband's earnings by part-time work: "Careful, don't make more than $250 or the excess will be deducted from your husband's exemption as head of a family."

It says to the man who is being asked to work overtime to provide the very production that is so vital to us: "Splendid, as a government we benefit both ways, more production, more taxes. For you? Whatever remains after we have taken our share."

It says to the aging man who might work as strength and health permit, to add his small share to our production: "Watch yourself. If you earn too much we will withdraw the benefits we have offered you."

We are asking men for results and saying in the same breath; "we'll make it hard for you to get them." We are training men to trade independence for dependence. We are saying: "If you don't look after yourselves we will look after you." Think well! When we lose the spirit of self-reliance what remains that is worth having?

Wainwright, Alberta

To The Farmers:

I have the permission of Mr. D. Gardener, chairman of the Grounds Committee of the Hospital Board, to make a suggestion. Anyone who has visited The New Hospital, will have noticed that the soil is very poor. In order to properly landscape the grounds, it will be necessary to haul in black soil and manure, to cover it to a depth of four to six inches. This will take 250 to 300 cubic yards. Unless this is done, we can not hope to have beautiful hospital grounds, and that would be a shame.

This black soil should be hauled in this fall, as farmers will be too busy to do it early in the spring. If this is done, we can make an early start next spring.

If the farmers would undertake to haul in this black soil, I am sure I can guarantee that the citizens of Wainwright will provide all necessary grass seed, shrubs and perennials. Also the necessary labor in the spring. In this way we can all have a share in beautifying the grounds, and be sure that a start will be made next spring. If this is not done, I'm afraid that little will be done next year, or that a half-hearted attempt will be made to get things to grow on the soil as it is.

If someone will undertake to organize the farmers to haul in the necessary black soil, I will undertake to look after the town.

I know it is getting late and freeze up may be expected at any time, but I am sure if you get busy, you can do it. Don't wait to be asked. When you are coming into town, fill your truck or wagon with some good black soil from your own farm, and dump it at the Hospital. In this way, the completed grounds, will represent every part of the district.

I Remain,

Takes Three Prizes At U.S. Horse Show

McCord, Sask.—The Appaloosa is a type of horse used for fast riding and Edward McCrea of this south-western Saskatchewan district is one of the five men in Western Canada who raises the animals that look as if they had been streaked with a paint brush.

Mr. McCrea came to McCord from New York State in 1909 when he first saw an Indian with one of the spotted horses and vowed he was going to own one.

Now he owns 30 of these unusual horses. This summer he carried off a first, a second and three thirds in competition with 60 Appaloosas entered by United States breeders at Lewiston, Idaho.

The type isn't registered in the Dominion but the Appaloosa Horse Club of Idaho is working to have the animals recognized. In the United States they bring as much as $600 and in Canada up to $200.

There's a lot of history back of the Appaloosa, which has been traced to 400 B.C. Chinese and Persian tapestries show horses with the same markings. But they were first reported in the United States in northern Idaho and eastern Washington where the Nez Perce Indians used them to outride the United States cavalry. They'd been known in England before that and somehow they'd worked as far south as Mexico.

There were so many of the horses in the Nez Perce region—known as the Palouse grassiands—they acquired a name from the district. That was Appaloosa, derived from Palouse.

Some of Mr. McCrea's 30 horses are white, some bay. One has black leopard spots on a white coat. He got his first Appaloosa in Saskatchewan although that horse apparently had come from Montana.

EDITING A WEEKLY

Editing a weekly is offering a public service. It is a job and a pleasure. It is both interesting and tedious. It is much the same as the man who banged his head against the wall because he felt so good when he stopped.

English Journey

Everyone who goes to England is anxious to see some of the bomb damage. Time and workmen are fast healing the scars, so that in some cities, when open spaces are seen, one often does not know whether they are the result of bombing, fires or just spaces that have never been built on.

In the smaller places and open country the casual observer today would see little or no signs of the late war. After a while, certain depressions in the fields can be recognized as craters caused by bombs and any resident of a community will readily show where any incidents occurred.

Most of the larger cities still have many signs of bomb damage, although it has been cleared up in some cities more than in others.

There is a vast area of workers homes which can be seen from the trains going from Waterloo station that in 1942 looked pretty awful, with apparently little left but the walls. Today those same houses are all repaired and inhabited, and from the train look the same as any other district of workers' homes. There are many other sections that have been repaired in the same way.

In London, one of the first places that the visitor goes to see is the area around St. Paul's Cathedral, and it has changed very little since I was there in 1942. The miracle of St. Paul's left almost unscathed, while everything around was demolished, can still be really appreciated when seen.

There is much bomb damage to be seen in Liverpool, Manchester, and other places, but Bristol still appeared to me to have the most striking examples of bomb damage. There may be other places with just as much devastation, such as Dover, Coventry, Hull, Portsmouth, etc., but Bristol shows more concentrated damage than any other city that I visited on this trip.

If anyone is interested in stories of the war, thousands of them can be collected, for although little is left on the secret list, only a small percentage of the stories have ever been told, in print at any rate.

The chief warden of a large area, almost entirely rural, recounted some of his experiences, and even got out some of his records to give some figures.

It was in his district that one of the most fantastic incidents of the war happened. It has appeared in print before, but is worth telling again. A parachute laid mine was dropped one night, and the parachute caught on the chimney of a large mansion. A maid in the house was not able to sleep all that night on account of the noise of something scraping on the wall outside her window, but she never got up to see what was causing the noise. The next morning it was discovered that a land mine, 10 feet long, was hanging from its parachute caught on the chimney, and it was this mine, swinging back and forth, that had kept her awake.

Almost as fantastic was a similar incident when a land mine fell in a narrow space between two hay stacks, and the parachute held the mine just off the ground.

The wardens and their staffs had a most efficient system by which they were advised of everything that happened in their territory, and were able to get to any spot in a remarkably short space of time. They were also kept advised of progress in other areas.

One night this warden was called to a house that had been bombed. There were two women in the house. An assistant came up to report that it was impossible to get one of the women into the ambulance, so the warden went down to investigate. He found that this woman was suffering from shock and was absolutely rigid in a sitting position, as she had been sitting when the bomb struck. When they pushed her feet down, her head came up, and when they tried to lower her head, her feet came up. The only way that they could get her into the ambulance was by taking out all the shelves.

In another case, a bomb sheared off the side of a house in which two women were staying, and one of the women walked out of the house unharmed.

It was in this area that the largest unexploded bomb fell. It was in a field not far from a town. As was the procedure in such a case, the residents of the neighborhood were evacuated, and the bomb disposal squad started digging for the bomb. They dug down over sixty feet before abandoning the search for the time being. It was later located 84 feet down in the earth.

To give some idea of what England went through during the bombing, it might be mentioned that in this area which covered 84 square miles, mostly rural as mentioned before, there fell 846 high explosives, 9 doodle bugs, 13 parachute mines, and many thousands of incendiary bombs.

The worst experiences that this warden had were when planes crashed, and he told of one flying fortress starting out on a mission that crashed with its load of bombs. The plane and its crew of ten were blown into thousands of small pieces.

There is an interesting story about a little hamlet of a few houses that I visited. Early in the war this hamlet was filled with evacuees from London. Soon after they arrived a number of bombs were dropped in the vicinity, and one bomb demolished a small house at the edge of the hamlet. The evacuees all trouped back to London. They said it was safer there.

One of the most fascinating stories was obtained from a very distant relative who is a survivor of Dunkirk. Like most of those heroes, he was not very anxious to talk about it, but with the help of his wife, we managed to get a few details.

He enlisted at the outbreak of war, and as he had a badly needed trade, he was shipped to France three weeks after he enlisted. When his company started evacuating, his pal was hit in the shoulder, so he carried two rifles on a forced march of 16 miles. By the time they reached the beach, it was more or less every man for himself. He and five others found they had for food only one small tin of sausages. One of them managed to steal a small pig, but they had just got it nicely cooked when a small bomb blew it to pieces.

Hearing that there were boats nine miles away, some of them set off to try and reach them. Snipers were firing at them all the way, and the man in front of him was killed. After three days on the beach he was finally taken off by a boat, but by that time all he had left was his trousers, boots, a tin hat and his wrist watch, and he hadn't shaved for four days.

On arrival in England, they were sent north on seventy-two hours leave. As he was destitute, he applied for pay, and in a tone of disgust he said that he finally got 10 shillings.

It would not be difficult to get material to write war stories for a long time to come.

EDGERTON

Last Wednesday the Village took on a very warlike appearance when 13 army tanks, the largest weighing 32 tons, with their attendant vehicles parked here for an hour while their personnel had their lunches. The public were invited to inspect them and they really had a good going over particularly by the school pupils who were given a little extra time off. Through the kind permission of Col. Chubb, the tanks under the command of Major Dawes proceeded to the sandhills just east of town and went through all sorts of performances demonstrating that practically no kind of ordinary country would stop them going where they wanted to go. Many of the spectators had rides in or on them and got quite a thrill out of it. The Mayor in all his glory less his pipe, occupied a seat in the leading tank. All the personnel were most friendly and explained the "all about a tank" and altogether a very enjoyable hour was spent by about 300 people from all parts of the district.

Dormitory Doings

An interesting afternoon was spent at the Wainwright High School Dormitory when the pupils, parents, supervisors and Dormitory Committee of the Divisional Board, met to discuss mutual problems on Friday, October 8th.

Dr. Folkins, Committee chairman, took charge of the gathering and ably outlined the policy of the Board in respect to Dormitory accommodation for High School Students. Fees have been raised this year owing to the high cost of food stuffs but it is hoped that these fees will not at any time become too burdensome to keep any ambitious student from receiving the benefits of a High School education.

Mr. Carter briefly outlined the values to be received by pupils living together, sharing their work and play, and generally co-operating to make themselves into good and useful citizens.

Mrs. Carter gave an outline of the daily life of the Dormitory from early morning until evening. She commented briefly on the fine spirit of good fellowship which exists among the boys and girls under her care.

Mr. Simonson, Divisional Superintendent, reviewed the many difficulties experienced during the first few months which the Dormitory operated and explained how these had been gradually overcome. He also stressed the fact that while regulations and order are an integral part of every home, they become much more important in an institution such as a Dormitory where a larger groun of people are working together and are dependent upon one another.

This year the smaller enrolment may in some measure be due to the increased bus service offered to High School pupils in the eastern part of the Division.

Mary White and Chester Newell. The parents present, unanimously representatives of the girls and approved the continuation of Mrs. boys, in a few words showed their C. M. Steele acting as parents' re- sincere appreciation of the services presentative for the year 1948-49. of Mr. and Mrs. Carter in doing all A hearty lunch, efficiently served they could to provide for the stud- by the Dormitory girls, brought the ents "A Home Away from Home." afternoon to a close. Hallowe'en is Shell-out Time and Everybody Loves the PURITY Pumpkin Pie!

Hallowe'en is coming round again! When your doorbell rings, be ready with this grand Purity Pumpkin pie . . . made with Purity Flour . . . of course! Here's a melt-in-your-mouth pastry recipe.

PURITY PASTRY (enough for 2 pie shells)

Sift together 1½ cups PURITY FLOUR and ½ teaspoon salt. Cut in ½ cup shortening into mixture with two knives, until it looks like very coarse meal. Add 3 tablespoons ice water gradually, mixing only enough to hold mixture together. Chill dough for 5 or 10 minutes and turn out on a lightly floured board. Roll with a light quick motion to ⅛ inch thickness. Press dough lightly into pie plates so that no air bubbles are trapped. Trim off the edge.

FILLING (1 pie)

Beat 2 eggs only until whites and yolks are well blended. Gradually beat in ½ cup white sugar, and add 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup molasses, a few grains of pepper, 1½ cups PURITY FLOUR. Stir in 1½ cups evaporated milk. Pour into pie plate lined with pastry and bake in hot oven (450°F.) for first ten minutes, then reduce temperature to moderate (350°F.) and continue to bake for 30-35 minutes, or until filling is firm. Cool and serve with whipped cream or decorate with a maple leaf. (Filling may be doubled if you wish 2 pumpkin pies.)

Remember, Purity Flour, specially milled from finest hard wheat—is best for all your baking.

Bad Highway Wreck West of Town

An accident of serious consequence occured on Thuraday evening, October 7th, between 5:30 and 6:00 p.m. on highway 14 west of Wainwright. Mr. S. A White and four lady companions of Canadian Publishers, were driving east. At a point about three and a half miles from Wainwright, they came upon a herd of cattle being driven home by their owner, Mr. Jas. Quinlan. Being unable to stop in time the car, a 1947 Plymouth Sedan, hit three cattle. One was killed instantly and the other two were seriously injured

Fortunately none of the occupants of the car were hurt, but damage done to the vehicle amounted to nearly $800.00. The car was insured and also the value of the cattle was covered in a property damage clause

Report to the People

It is my sincere wish that before this column reaches its many readers, all of the threshing and combining will be completed and that all farmers will have had a pleasant surprise in the form of much better yields than they expected up to the time they commenced harvesting. A better than average grade this season is also some cause for optimism.

In my two previous articles in these columns I attempted to bring to the attention of our people some of the injustices that have been and are being borne by our farmers in the hope that some concerted action will be taken at an early date by town and country people alike to bring pressure to bear on the Dominion Government to repay to the farmers the losses they have been compelled to suffer by reason of the Government's generosity in giving away the products of the prairie farms at prices far below market levels—a policy that no other occupational group has been subjected to. On the contrary, manufacturers of war goods were given cost plus contracts—the "plus" on the average being ten per cent with special depreciation privileges for income tax purposes being granted in many cases. This matter, I believe, is of sufficient importance to our prairie provinces, to warrant the earnest attention and support of Provincial Governments, Municipal Governments, ALL farmer organizations, Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce and all other public bodies that exist for the benefit of our communities at large, because the residents of our towns and cities are deprived of a good percentage of every dollar that the farmers lose in the sale of their grain, livestock and other farm produce, to say nothing of the hundreds of millions of dollars that are lost annually by the farmers, money that should rightfully be used to pay off farm debts, build better homes with modern conveniences installed, build machine sheds to house the scarce and expensive power and other farm machinery, better barns to house more and better livestock and generally to do those things that would make farm life more attractive for our young people who have been vacating the farms and finding employment in towns and cities where hours of work are much shorter and ways of living more attractive.

Commencing August 1st last, the price of wheat to the British Government was increased to two dollars per bushel under the British Wheat Agreement and the initial price paid to the farmers still remains at $1.55 per bushel. This means that the farmer is again deprived of forty five cents per bushel of cash received by the Government for his wheat until the end of the contract period unless the powers that be decide in the meantime to increase the initial payment, which can now be done without further amending legislation. Many farmers are still in debt and paying substantial sums in interest on debt that should be paid off with the monies that are being held back in the Wheat Board funds to see that the Government does not have to stand any loss on the so-called Farm Stabilization Policy.

As we are coming to the close of another year, the annual chore or headache of making up income tax forms will soon have to be taken care of. The question of establishing "basic herds" for income tax purposes has been discussed for many months and during the Summer a news item in the press stated that a final decision in the matter had been arrived at by the Income tax officials. On August 16th I wrote for a copy of the directive that dealt with this and on the 20th was advised that final approval had not yet been given the proposed directive.

The reply also stated, and I quote: "We realize that this is a matter of great interest to many farmers in Alberta and it has been our wish to be as sure as possible that the provisions of the proposed new directive be thoroughly worked out, so it will be equitable to all.

Even though there has been somewhat of a delay in making public the provisions of the new directive, there will be ample time allowed to those who are presently selling, or are anticipating the selling off of part or all of their herds. Anyone who thinks he may be interested in establishing a basic herd, should write to their District Income Tax Office, requesting that they be forwarded complete instructions and application forms for the establishment of a basic herd just as soon as same are available."

Having been asked about the establishment of "Basic Herds" on several occasions, I hope the above information may be of value to those interested.

It would seem that we are condemned to continue payment of Income and many other forms of taxes as long as the people are content to put up with our present monetary system. The following is taken from The Western Producer of September 30th.

"The International Monetary Fund meeting at Washington Tuesday, issued a statement calling upon the nations to seek greater efficiency in production and to speed up exports.

It suggested member nations seek to balance budgets by cutting Government spending, maintainance of high taxation rates and encouragement of saving."

Most people are acquainted with Russia's form of dictatorship. We, the Free, Christian and Civilized people are labouring under a Financial dictatorship of which the above a child of the Canadian and other Parliaments forms a part. This would not be tolerated or necessary under a Social Credit setup. Why not investigate?

Robert Fair

Canadian Press SPORTS CAMERA

Athletic rivalry among Empire countries has been sharpened to its keenest edge in sport history. This rivalry was scattered and small before the war but now that countries are concentrating on development of international-class athletes, it has surged to the fore.

The greatest rivalry appears in professional boxing—the result of a better class of fighters being produced in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, and of course, the British Isles.

But not only the ring game shows this upswing. The Australia-England cricket Test matches once again highlighted sports pages in both countries. And even in Canada, where cricket generally is a game of the few, interprovincial matches have become an annual affair. It is expected a team will tour England before long.

Soccer is another game becoming international in scope. Crack British teams visited Canada and Australia this year on exhibition tours and more are expected later. Hockey, Canada's own game, is taking a firm grip on the British sports fan and Canadian players leave yearly to play for British clubs.

The tug-o'-war between Canada and New Zealand for the 1950 British Empire Games was headlined in many Canadian newspapers. New Zealand finally won the nod but not until after Canada offered Toronto, Hamilton and Vancouver as possible spots. Canada hopes to get the next set.

Olympics an Impetus

Impetus to this growing movement was given by the recent Olympics where Canadian, British, Indian, Australian, New Zealand and other Commonwealth athletes vied for honors in the world's greatest sports spectacle.

This competition built up desire for bigger, better more frequent matches with specialists in every field of athletics providing more spirited competition, better records to aim at and better understanding between the people of the Dominions.

As example of this keener rivalry in boxing was last Friday's bout at Manchester between the British and European lightweight champion Billy Thompson, and the Canadian lightweight titleholder, Lyl Arthur King of Toronto, for the Empire lightweight crown. King battered his opponent into submission in seven rounds.

The two fighters were to have met in Canada last June during the 22-year-old Yorkshire miner's North American visit. The fight was called off, however, when the Briton's manager disagreed with the Ontario Boxing Commission over officials

But the fact that King followed Thompson back to England for the chance to pick up the lightweight crown points up the interest now being shown in Empire titles.

It may seem far-fetched at present, but who knows? Perhaps the day will come when Canada will go to Britain, or Britain will come to Canada, to compete for possession of the coveted Ashes of cricket, the Football Association Cup of soccer, or the Stanley cup of hockey.

UNUSUAL FIRE HAZARD

Time Out For Laughs

The doctor was checking up on the oldest man in the community. "You're in wonderful shape," the doctor marvelled. "How old did you say you were "Eighty-eight!" the Old Boy replied.

"Eighty - eight! Well, I've been practising med icine for forty-five years and I've never run into a man of your years in such perfect physical con dition before. Tell me, to what do you attribute such long life and good health?"

"Wal, I'll tell you doc, it's thissa way. When we got married fust my wife and me made a agreement never to argue with each other. Ef'n she got mad at me, she promised as how she's go into the kitchen and say nothing till she cooled down; and ef'n I got mad I said as how I wouldn't say a word but go out into the back-yard until I did likewise."

"But what's that got to do with it?" asked the puzzled doctor.

'Wal, Doc,' the Old man drawled, "I reckon as how I've led what you might call something of an outdoor life!"

"No Case is Hopeless"

U.N. AT PARIS DEADLOCKED

The United Nations General Assembly meeting in Paris was deadlocked last week-end on its two main problems—the Berlin blockade and the international control of atomic energy.

As in most of the earthquakes the three-year-old world agency has experienced, it was an East-West split with the rift growing wider and the rending sound more furious.

The nice diplomatic language was fast disappearing from the speeches in conference rooms of the Palais de Chaillot.

Hector McNeil, Britain's minister of state, pulled no punches when he told the 58-member political committee debating the atomic energy problem, that the western world is "too afraid of Russia" to disarm itself. He accused the Soviet of "terror" tactics.

In rebuttal, Julius Katz-Suchy of the Soviet satellite Poland, was just as bitter. He charged that the United States is preparing an "atomic blitzkrieg" with bigger and better bombs.

In the Security Council, veteran diplomat Sir Alexander Cadoan of Britain put the western powers stand on the Berlin problem in blunt strong words.

He declared that the only alternative to breaking the Russian blockade by force was the western powers' appeal, to the council.

The Soviet refused to even discuss the Berlin case in the council. The western powers urged the council to help lift the Soviet blockade of the city.

In both cases the Soviet cried that the western powers were attempting to curtail Russian national sovereignty.

The Russian argument in the Berlin case was that the Council had no right to discuss Berlin. That, cried Russia's fiery Andrei Vishinsky, was a matter for the Council of Foreign Ministers.

The United States replied that immediately the "illegal" Berlin blockade was lifted the whole question of Germany could come before the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Although the Soviet had made two steps towards the western position on atomic energy control, there was no indication that the Soviet was ready to accept the strict international supervision implicit in the majority report of the United Nations' Atomic Energy Commission.

Gen. A. G. L McNaughton of Canada put forward a resolution that the majority report be accepted.

The Soviet then agreed that some form of international control would be the best method. And the Soviet —changing its old tune that atomic bombs should be destroyed before international control was put into effect—proposed that destruction of bombs and control be put into effect simultaneously.

But the Russians still skirted the vital question of whether they would accept unlimited international supervision of all the uses of atomic energy.

A first-class political and international sensation developed in the United States last week.

The Columbia Broadcasting System revealed that President Truman had asked it and other United States networks for time for an announcement that Chief Justice Fred Vinson was being sent to Moscow in attempt to reach a peaceful solution of the Berlin deadlock, face to face with Prime Minister Stalin.

But before the networks had been lined up, the request was cancelled without explanation. When the incident came to light the president, White House spokesman and the State Department refused to comment.

It was on Tuesday of last week—the day of the projected broadcast—that President Truman announced he was calling State Secretary Marshall home from the present U.N. session at Paris to report on the chances of peaceful settlement with Russia.

As Marshall flew home last week, reports circulated in Washington that both he and Under-Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett opposed "in the strongest terms" any approach to Stalin.

And at Paris, sources close to the British delegation said President Truman's reported plan to initiate direct contact with Russia over Berlin "would have rocked and could have wrecked the United Nations." (The Berlin issue has been formally brought before the United States and French governments.)

These informants said that if the reported Washington move had taken place it would have meant a "flou settling international disputes in ting of the Security Council and a disrespected completely."
